

A STEADICAM follows the sequential shots. Jack steps out of his dressing room, he's changed into casual clothes, walks down the corridor, when a DHL delivery boy catches up with him.

DHL BOY

Mr Tramell? I've got delivery for you.

The boy gives him a mailer.

DHL BOY (CONT'D)

Sign here please... (stares at Jack in admiration) So you're the one who knows all of the answers right?

Jack signs, without saying anything.

DHL BOY (CONT'D)

I bet a 100$ you can't guess the number of passes completed by Joe Montana during his career.

Jack doesn't bother answering, the boy insists, he takes a 100 dollar bill out of his pocket and flourishes it under his nose.

DHL BOY (CONT'D)

Oh Well, Mr three minutes, looks like you owe me a 100 bucks.

Jack takes the challenge.

JACK

During his career Joe Montana had 3,409 passes completed out of 5,391 attempts, 273 touchdowns, 139 interceptions, and 40,551 yards passing. He also charged 1,676 yards and 20 touchdowns.

Jack gives the dumbfounded boy a condescending look.

JACK (CONT'D)

Looks like you owe me a 100 bucks... boy.

Takes the bill from him.

DHL BOY

Come on, I was just kidding.

JACK

I never play on money.

DHL BOY

Hey man, give me my money back. It's Thanksgiving... I'm taking my girlfriend out tonight.

JACK

When you dare someone, you must be ready to go to the very bottom of it all.

DHL BOY

Oh, fuck it.

Jack turns his back to him and leaves him standing there in shock. Walks past by the guardian and gives him the bill.

ROBERT

Good evening Mr. Tramell.

JACK

Robert, have a happy Thanksgiving dinner with your lady.

Jack puts the 100 dollar bill he has just won, in his hand.

ROBERT

Thank you Mr. Tramell.

Jack exits the studio.